August 18, 2021

Foster City, CA – August 18, 2021 – Saving on car insurance is always top of mind for drivers but finding the best rates can be as time consuming as it is complicated. To make this process easier, CarInsurance.com, a one-stop destination for unbiased, expert advice on car insurance, releases a resource that compiles the cheapest rates offered by both major and smaller car insurance companies. The report, Cheapest \(and Best\) Car Insurance Companies \(August 2021\), includes information vetted by experts in several categories—including insurance rates based on driver's age, location, and habits.

"Although the price of car insurance should be considered when looking for coverage, it's not the only important factor in making a decision," says CarInsurance.com Editorial Director Michelle Megna. "Our experts' extensive research on auto insurance rates is a good starting point to narrow choices, but drivers should consider factors such as customer service, claim processing experience and eligibility for discounts before purchasing any policy."

After reviewing average rates, consumers can use a car insurance estimator tool to get a clear view of likely rates for their general circumstances, without providing any contact information.

The study shows good value insurance options in various categories, including:

- Comprehensive coverage
- Drivers with speeding tickets
- Drivers with poor credit
- Drivers with accidents
- Student and teens
- Low-mileage drivers

The guide includes detailed information on how much car insurance rates increase after speeding tickets as well as insights from Cynthia Burleson, director of the Center for Insurance & Risk Management at Central Arkansas University, who discusses trends in car insurance rates and explains factors that make car insurance costly.

Megna is available to answer questions about the methodologies used to curate CarInsurance.com's cheapest insurance lists and elaborate on ways to choose coverage that meets drivers' individual needs.
